Andrew Bond is a specialist in the field of Family law, with experience and expertise across a wide range of cases.

Expertise

Child Abduction

Andrew only gets involved in more complex private law proceedings, usually involving extra-jurisdictional issues, guardians for the child or children, significant allegations of domestic violence or abuse. He is also instructed in removal from the jurisdiction cases.

Children Law (Private)

Andrew only gets involved in more complex private law proceedings, usually involving extra-jurisdictional issues, guardians for the child or children, significant allegations of domestic violence or abuse. He is also instructed in removal from the jurisdiction cases.

Children Law (Public)

Andrew's main instructions come from parents, although he also represents local authorities. He regularly encounters cases of neglect, physical, sexual and emotional abuse. However he also has experience of cases involving placement outside the jurisdiction and is aware of the practical problems, such as international social work assessments and immigration issues, associated with those types of cases.
