Neelo Shravat is an experienced child law barrister. He specialises in acting for parents, children and local authorities in public law proceedings including matters before the High Court and Court of Appeal.

He has significant experience in handling a wide range of cases, including those involving allegations of sexual abuse, inflicted injury, fabricated illness, and cases with significant international elements.

Neelo has a particular expertise in acting for vulnerable parents including parents with learning disabilities or serious mental health issues, and those who require the engagement of the Official Solicitor.

He also undertakes complex private law cases that may involve allegations of domestic abuse, sexual abuse, 'intractable' contact cases, changes of residence, and applications for leave to remove from the jurisdiction.

Neelo brings a broad breadth of experience to his courtroom advocacy having started his career with a busy criminal and common law practice before focussing on family law for the past 10 years. He remains resolutely committed to publicly funded work and considers it the heart of his practice.
